

appeared in the various allegorical scenes as clowns or their wages, which have not yet been paid, but of this Mr. White said he knew nothing. The crowd would have to look to Capt. Alfred Thomson.

The naval and military parades and school children's turnout, to say nothing of the fireworks and the entertainment of guests, will all make a powerful showing on the expense account.

It is estimated that New York spent at least $5,000,000 in decorations and illuminations during the celebration, which includes all the private displays.

MUCH MORE THAN A MILLION.

Figures Which Show, Approximately, the Size of Wednesday's Crowd.

Some idea can be formed of the stupendous size of the throngs which the Columbian festivities attracted to this city from the figures of Wednesday's passenger traffic furnished by the various railroads and ferry companies.

From these it would appear that the number of out-of-town visitors in New York on that day were between 400,000 and 500,000. Add to these the New Yorkers who turned out to witness the great demonstrations on Wednesday, and the crowds in the streets who saw or tried to see the parades capably be put down at a million and a quarter.

From a 2.30 p.m. Wednesday until 2.30 p.m. Thursday the number of people (incoming and outgoing) handled by the railroads during the Grand Central Depot was 150,000. The Thirty-fourth street ferry, which brought in most of the people from Long Island, carried 55,000; the West shore, 50,000; South and Hamilton ferries, 15,000; the Erie Railroad, 47,000; the Pennsylvania ferry, 10,000; the Jersey Central, 6,000; the Staten Island ferry, 15,000; and Brooklyn Bridge, 300,000.

It may be safely assumed that there were thousands of strangers in the city who had been coming in for several days previous and who remained here during the entire celebration.

In order to accommodate the rush, the New York Central and Harlem roads ran for three days an average 1,000 cars a day; the West Haven road, 400; the West Shore, 400; the Erie, 300; the Pennsylvania, 100; and the Jersey Central, 100. These roads ran crowded trains out of the city until 3 o'clock yesterday morning, and even then lots of people were left and had to stay in town. There were hundreds who could not obtain shelter, and were obliged to walk the streets all the morning before they began running again.

ANGRY CHICAGO VISITORS.

They Think They Were Snubbed and Stay Away from the Banquet.

Chicago visitors in town gave the Columbian banquet the go-by last evening. Only three of all the guests representing the city government of that town and the World's Fair commission were present, although a large number of the invitations had been accepted and the people were in town.

It is said to be all on account of the alleged snub which the City Fathers of Chicago received from the Invitation Committee when they reached New York, and which they indignantly resented. They are said to have received official invitations to the banquet at 7 o'clock last evening, but voted not to attend. They regarded this tardy acknowledgment of their importance as an additional insult.

Reva Selkin Turned to Death.

Reva Selkin, fifty-six years old, wife of Abraham Selkin, a tinsmith, of 129 Clinton street, upset an olive-oil while asleep in a chair late last night, and her dress catching fire, she was roasted to death. Her husband was asleep in the same room, but when he was awakened he was so frightened he could do nothing to save his wife.

DR. DEPEW FELT SLIGHTED.

Not Invited to Speak at the Columbian Banquet.

The Great After-Dinner Orator Had a Ticket to the Floor.

The absence of Dr. Chauncey M. Depew from the big banquet in the Lenox Lyceum last night is being freely commented upon to-day.

The fact of the matter is that whether intentionally or through an oversight on the part of the Committee on Invitations Dr. Depew did not receive a formal invitation to attend the banquet in the capacity of toastmaster. As Mr. Depew is not in the habit of attending formal dinners on a mere verbal invitation to "come around" he remained away.

To settle the question as to whether the Committee on Invitations had slighted the great after-dinner speaker an EVENING WORLD reporter called upon Dr. Depew this morning. In answer to the question as to what occasioned his absence, Dr. Depew said:

"As far as I knew I had nothing to call me to last night's banquet. I was only asked to eat my dinner, and as I was the presiding officer at the meeting to be held at the Union League Club, I went there to perform that duty."

"Did you receive an invitation to the Columbian banquet, Dr. Depew?"

"Oh, yes! I received a ticket—for the floor," and Dr. Depew dived down into an inside coat pocket and brought up a printed card numbered something like 786, and held it out to the reporter with a somewhat quizzical expression on his face.

With all Dr. Depew's inimitable tact it was most difficult for him to conceal that something hurt at what may or may not have been an intentional slight.

"I did not receive an invitation to the Columbian banquet," Dr. Depew said this morning. "An invitation was sent to Mr. Depew as president of the Columbian Commission of the World's Fair. The invitation was sent to him just as all other invited guests received theirs—through the mails. No letter was received from him accepting or declining the invitation."

MR. MACKENZIE'S DOWSED FLAG.

No Action Taken Yet by English Consulate Officials.

An EVENING WORLD reporter called at the British Consulate this morning to ascertain what action, if any, Consul-General Frazer had taken with regard to the incident at Bronxville, where a number of residents bailed down an English flag from a staff in front of Edmund Lyons Mackenzie's house and ran up in its stead the Stars and Stripes.

Mr. Frazer was absent, but Second Vice-Consul Donnelly said it was not probable that anything would be done until a reply was received from Sir Julian Pauncefote, the British Minister at Washington, to the communication detailing the circumstances which was transmitted by Mr. Mackenzie yesterday.

"I think, Mr. Donnelly thought, might have some instructions to give with regard to an investigation of the matter, but he did not intend that any serious international complications would result."

FOUND AFTER THREE YEARS.

M. D. Wheeler's Skeleton Lay All This Time in Cameron Woods.

Suffering from Nervousness When He Disappeared Nov. 1, 1889.

Came upon the discovery of missing Accountant Cox's body in a wood in British Columbia comes the finding of the skeleton of M. D. Wheeler, who had been missing from his home on Staten Island since November, 1889.

The missing man's relatives had scoured the country far and near for him, but had not heard one single word concerning him for nearly three years until yesterday, when James Clark, of 412 Madison street, a Max Lichtenberger, of 33 Avenue A, the city, reported to the Staten Island police that they had found a human skeleton in a dense underbrush in the Cameron Wood, near South Beach.

They ran across the ghastly find Wednesday, while hunting for a missing witness of the night Columbian parade hurried back to the city without notifying anyone. They told a New York policeman, however, who advised them to notify the Staten Island authorities at once.

The police investigated and found the skeleton, which they carried over to Corporal Hughes of Clinton. Under the left socket of the skull was a bullet hole and close by was a rusty coil revolver.

In the pockets of the clothing, which still encased the skeleton, were two knives, an open-faced silver watch, $32 in bills and this note:

In case of accident or accident, this will advise that I am M. D. Wheeler, (Union, N. Y. Please advise by telephone Dr. M. D. Wheeler, who is in my office, or Dr. S. N. White Dental Works, 312 Broadway.

A. W. Johnson, of the White Dental Works, promptly identified the clothing effects and revolver as belonging to his uncle, M. D. Wheeler, who disappeared suddenly from the home of his father, Melville Johnson, at Archer, N. Y., 1889.

Dr. Johnson, 113 West 113th street, mentioned in the note, was this morning seen at his home, 113 West 113th street, by an EVENING WORLD reporter. Dr. Wheeler was the most intimate friend of the dead man, outside of his own relatives, and was his attending physician.

Dr. Wheeler was much affected when speaking of his friend and the terrible circumstances attending his death. He said that he had a position of trust with the White Dental company, and overtook himself in working on the completion of the company's new factory at Prince's Bay.

"For a year previous to his disappearance I had been obliged to exercise the greatest care to keep him from breaking down entirely, but he would keep at work when I insisted on his resting."

"Four days before he went away he had a attack of vertigo, and remained partially confined to his bed until the Thursday when he started at 1 o'clock for the factory. He was never seen alive again."

"He was very nervous that morning, but appeared perfectly rational. The family missed a dinner, and it was without eddy the one found beside him. A fit of sudden aberration must have seized him and impelled him to the horrible deed. Had some one been with him no doubt he would now be alive."

"There was no other reason for his act. He was a finely educated man, a linguist and graduate of Harvard and the Columbia School, came of a splendid family and was comfortably situated financially."
